UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA Lafayette

Welcome to the University of Louisiana at Lafayette, home of Louisiana's Ragin' Cajuns.

UL Lafayette's campus offers first-time visitors two distinctive, must-see features.

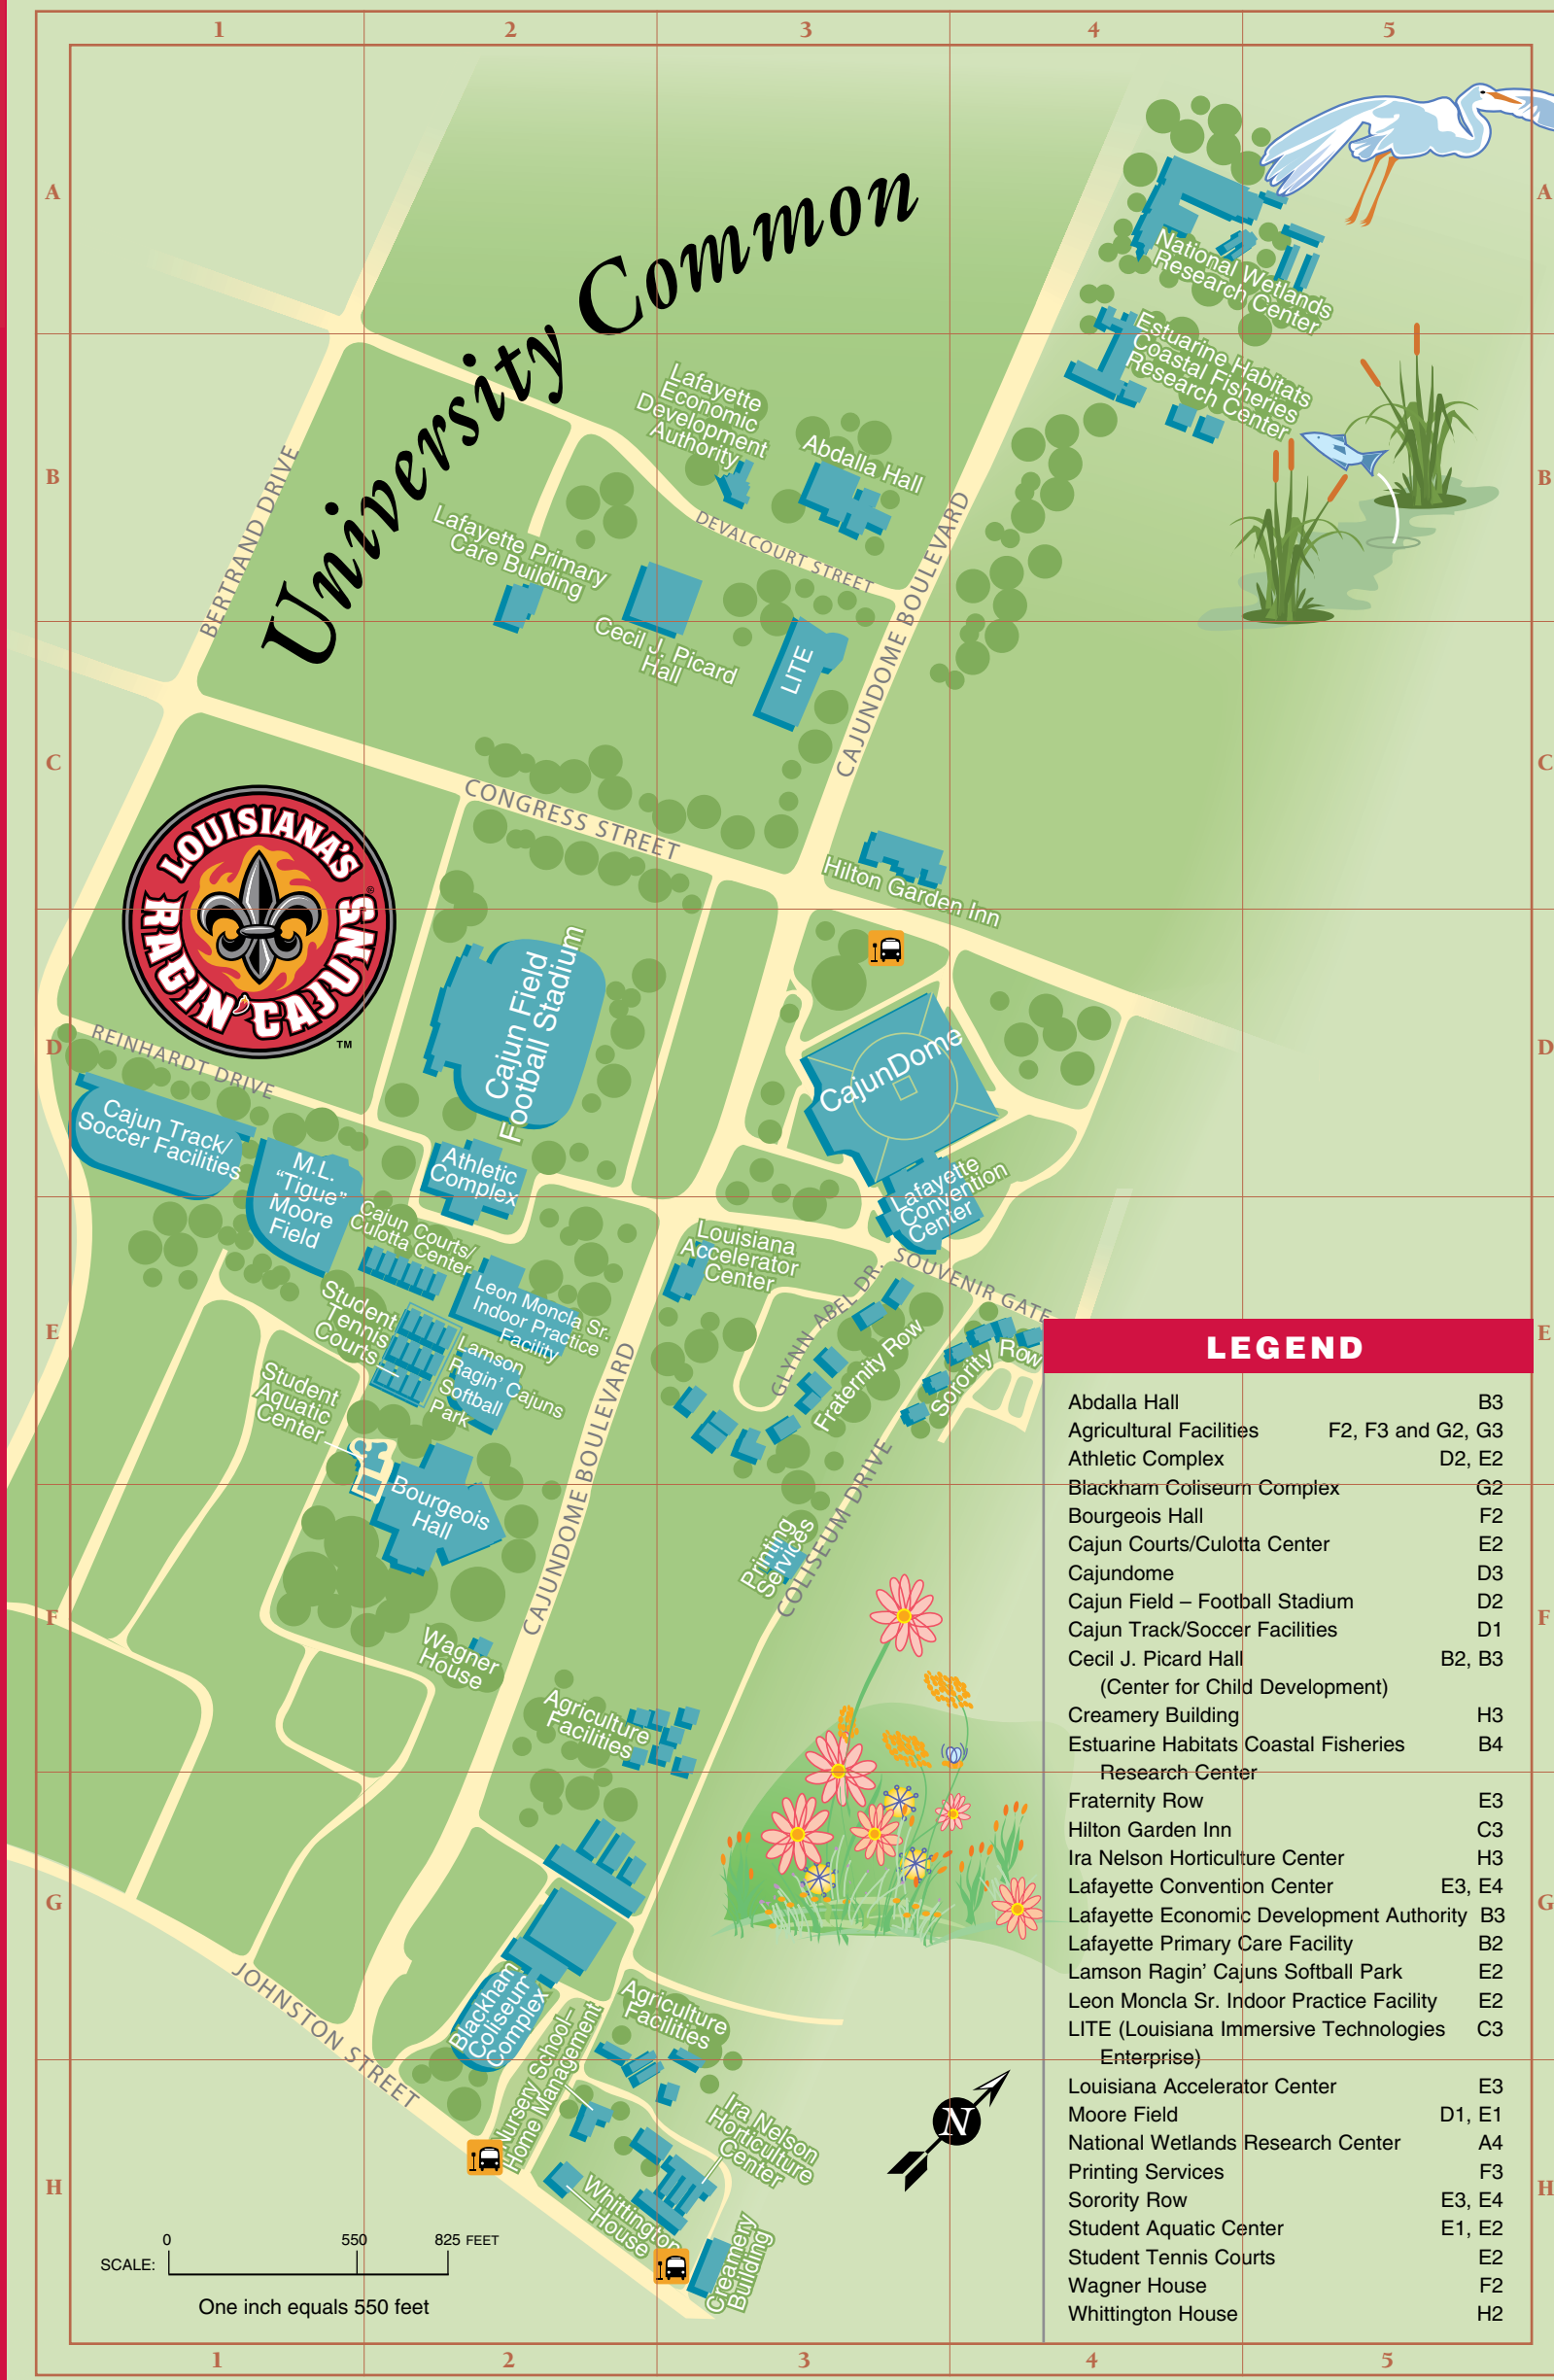

- Cypress Lake is a managed wetlands filled with cypress trees, alligators, turtles, fish and a variety of plants. It's behind the Student Union, between Hebrard Boulevard and McKinley Street.
- Several "Century Oaks" grace the campus. They were planted by Dr. Edwin L. Stephens, the university's first president, on Jan. 1, 1901. The giant trees are noted on this map.

Since opening in 1901, UL Lafayette has become the second largest university in the state, with more than 16,000 students. It's a public, selective admissions institution that grants bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees.

The Carnegie Foundation has designated UL Lafayette as a "Research University with high research activity." So, UL Lafayette is in the same research category as universities such as Baylor, Auburn and Clemson.

Louisiana's Ragin' Cajuns® compete in NCAA Division 1, the highest level of collegiate athletics.

More information about the University of Louisiana at Lafayette is available at www.louisiana.edu

If you're a UL Lafayette alum who hasn't been on campus in a while, here are some sites you shouldn't miss.

- Take a look inside Edith Garland Dupré Library. The exterior may seem slightly familiar, but once you enter, you won't recognize the place. It's magnificent.
- The new Paul and Lulu Hilliard University Art Museum on East St. Mary Boulevard is itself a work of art. Spend a few moments relaxing at the refreshing "water wall" before heading inside for more visual delights.
- Stroll down the Walk of Honor, which is paved with bricks bearing the names of all UL Lafayette graduates. Arranged by class year, it begins on the south side of Martin Hall and encircles the Quad.
- Check out the new Advanced Computer Technology and Research Hall, which houses the Computer Science Department and the Center for Advanced Computer Studies. It's next to Madison Hall, on the spot where McNaspy Stadium once stood.
- Step inside the Quadrangle. Notice anything different? F.G. Mouton Hall (behind Martin Hall) now has an entrance from the Quad. Before renovations in 2005, there were only doors at either end of the building. F.G. Mouton is connected by walkways to Moody Hall, new home of the B. I. Moody III College of Business Administration.
- Drive past the LITE building in University Research Park. It's at the intersection of Cajundome Boulevard and Devalcourt Street. That three-story, egg-shaped section contains a six-sided "total immersion space," where researchers can explore massive amounts of data that have been converted into 3-D images.
